

The 10 best lunchboxes 2019

Frozzypack lunchbox

Best lunchbox for keeping your lunch cold

Pros: keeps lunch cold without the need for ice packs

Cons: on the small side

If you're fed up with having warm salad for lunch, or tired of carting about cool bags and ice packs, this lunchbox could be the answer. Just put the lid in the freezer for at least 10 hours – we kept it in overnight. Once you've made your lunch in the morning, put the lid back on the box and it will keep your food cold.

We filled the box with salad and left it in a warm kitchen for five hours (the average time between making your lunch and eating it). Our salad was beautifully chilled. The packaging claims it will stay cold for around seven hours, and it was still cold after this time too.

We liked the way the lid clicked on without any clasps, and it didn't leak either. It's safe to use in the dishwasher or microwave (except the lid). There's a small separate, removable lidded box inside as well.